

Dianne R. Layden Ph.D., is a semi-retired college professor and writer in Albuquerque. She holds a doctorate in American Studies from the University of New Mexico and has taught at the University of Houston and University of Redlands in Southern California among other institutions. Research interests include New Mexico history and culture, including Jewish history. Writing achievements include first-place awards from the New Mexico Press Women for an article about hate crimes at Nosh Deli in Albuquerque from the National Federation of Press Women for a two-part article about Holocaust survivors in New Mexico. Currently, she is portraying Ruth Bader Ginsburg for the New Mexico Humanities Council in its Chautauqua program and preparing a booklet about the repurchase of Temple Montefiore in Las Vegas, NM the oldest synagogue in the state by the Las Vegas Jewish Community, Inc.